Technical Appendix

Sample Size

The results of this opinion poll are based upon a representative sample of 922 eligible Irish voters aged 18 years+.

Fieldwork

As such, the results can be deemed to be accurate to within plus or minus 3.3 percentage points at the 95% confidence level. Fieldwork was conducted on an in-home, face-to-face basis over the period Thursday 26th August – Wednesday, 8th September, 2021.

Location

The sample was stratified across all constituencies at 125 locations in the country with individuals selected for interview by way of Demographic Quotas (age, gender, socio-economic status) in line with Central Statistics Office (CSO) and market research industry population estimates.

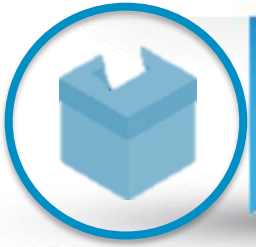
Technical Appendix

Weighting

The subsequent survey results are weighted to reflect the known demographic profile of Irish adults, utilising the most recently published census population estimates from the Central Statistics Office (CSO).

Party Support

Party support levels are subsequently realigned in accordance with a technical adjustment factor, designed to smooth the effects of extreme highs and lows in support levels for individual parties as measured at a single point in time, and taking variable election day turnout levels into account.



Guidelines

All aspects of the survey, including the Party Support adjustment factor, are implemented in accordance with the technical and ethical guidelines set down by the Association of Irish Market Research Organisations (AIMRO) and the European Society of Opinion & Market Research (ESOMAR).

Q.7 If there was a General Election tomorrow, to which party or independent candidate would you give your first preference vote?

Party Support Adjustment Factor: Technical Note

- Predicting election results on the basis of poll data is not an exact science. All the evidence shows that support for individual parties can swing dramatically in the period between elections- very often outside the bounds of historic election results.
- What to do in these circumstances? Most polling companies in Britain and Ireland publish their raw survey results as an index of fluctuations in the emotional mood of voters. They also build in an adjustment based on a number of factors. Where we have reports of how people voted in the last general election as well as how they intend to vote in the next one we can use these data to model the likely level of swing from the last election results.
- We then add back in the forecasts of voters who have not voted last time or do not answer that particular question.
- Finally we take into account each individuals stated likelihood of voting in a forthcoming General Election.
- This is the basis of the adjusted voting forecast in Behaviour & Attitudes polls.

Adjusted figures based on:

- All who state they would definitely vote
- Weighting of those respondents who give a definite answer as to who they would vote for in a general election and who they voted for in the last election, a quarter of the way between stated voting intention and the result of the last election.
- Making no adjustment to stated voting intention of those who do not indicate how they voted in last election.

Q.9 Which of the following do you feel are the 3 most important issues facing Ireland today?

Commentary

Background

Fieldwork for today's poll was conducted over the period Thursday 26th August to Wednesday 8th September, 2021.

As such, it represents the annual Sunday Times/Behaviour & Attitudes 'back to school' poll, as the Dáil prepares to resume business on Wednesday, 15th September next.

By way of context, respondents' opinions in today's survey will undoubtedly have been influenced by the near-culmination of Ireland's exceptionally successful vaccination programme, whereby at the time of writing almost 90% of all adults have been fully vaccinated. In addition, a vaccination booster programme for the most vulnerable in society was also announced as survey fieldwork drew to a close.

From a political perspective, it is fair to say that Micheál Martin as Taoiseach has claimed, and been granted, significant credit for the vaccination programme, certainly moreso than the Tánaiste or Minister for Health.

Survey interviewing was also in progress for the publication and discussion of Fianna Fáil's Housing For All Plan – the multi-billion euro blueprint towards delivering affordable housing for all citizens.

Unfortunately for Fianna Fáil, most of the publicity surrounding the report's launch was swamped by the media frenzy surrounding the attempted appointment of Katherine Zappone as a UN envoy.

Meanwhile, as the Zappone controversy rolled on and on, social media coverage of Leo Varadkar attending a festival in the UK while live hospitality in Ireland remained severely curtailed will not have helped improve the Tánaiste's image amongst the electorate.

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

At a glance, today's poll reveals a significant drop in satisfaction with the Government, and a very significant decline of 9 percentage points in Leo Varadkar's personal rating as leader of Fine Gael and Tánaiste.

Satisfaction with the remaining party leaders remains static compared to last July, with Mary Lou McDonald the most popular leader at 48% satisfaction, followed by Micheál Martin on 45% and Alan Kelly on 44%. As tends to be the case with smaller parties, satisfaction with Eamon Ryan as leader of the Green Party remains solid, with around one-third of the electorate consistently happy with the job he is doing.

In terms of party support, Sinn Féin has improved its standing by three percentage points to a position whereby one-third of the electorate indicates it would vote for that party in the event of a General Election. Voter support for Fianna Fáil, at 21%, is on a par with that registered in July (20%), and indeed with the 22% share of the vote it received in last year's General Election.

Fine Gael's standing has declined, albeit statistically insignificantly, from 25% in July to 23% today, which again is in or around its actual performance in the General Election. Finally, there has been no change over the last two months in support for the Labour Party at 5% or the Green Party (5%).

None of the above is to suggest however that either Fianna Fáil or Fine Gael would be particularly happy with their recent poll performance. In the case of Fianna Fáil, a 21% share of the vote could result in its losing even more seats in the next election, potentially dropping from its current 38 seats to as low as 35 or so.

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

Its current low standing in the polls began with a very poor general election campaign which resulted in the loss of 7 seats. The party's woes continued with a shambolic start to Government, and a series of forced ministerial resignations.

While the opposition might attribute Fianna Fáil's decline to the performance of a Taoiseach they would claim has failed to place his stamp of authority on Government, it is a fact that Martin remains one of the more popular party leaders in the country. His popularity may well be attributed to his role in overseeing the highly successful vaccination programme, and time will tell how long he continues to benefit in this regard. Apart from the Taoiseach and leader of Fianna Fáil, it is safe to say that none of the other Fianna Fáil front bench has performed particularly well over the last year and a half. While no one could have foreseen the effect of Covid on the health system, health minister Donnelly has often appeared out of his depth in dealing with the crisis, often resorting to consultancy speak when dealing with key issues of public concern.

Fianna Fáil was also unfortunate insofar as the publication of its intended landmark plan for housing was completely over-shadowed by the furore over Simon Coveney and Leo Varadkar's handling of the Katherine Zappone UN envoy appointment.

Fine Gael's recent poor run in the polls began in earnest earlier this summer. On the back of a very poor election campaign which saw Fine Gael end up in third place behind Fianna Fáil and Sinn Féin, it became apparent that Leo Varadkar was struggling to connect with the general public at any meaningful level.

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

Certainly, Fine Gael's hope that its young, energetic leader would transform the party and attract a slew of new voters has not come to pass. Some would even describe Varadkar as more conservative on many issues than previous leaders of Fine Gael, and more focused on image and spin than substance.

In the period leading up to the last General Election, Leo Varadkar and Simon Coveney appeared to represent something of a double act – Coveney the safe and reliable pair of hands, alongside the charismatic yet arguably more flighty Varadkar. In fact, in more recent months Coveney was arguably one of Fine Gael's greatest assets – the embodiment of the core traditional Fine Gael values of honesty, transparency and integrity.

There is no doubt that Coveney's obfuscation and evasiveness in dealing with the Katherine Zappone controversy has tarnished his image considerably. Following the events of the last couple of months, Fine Gael has work to do to rebuild trust between itself and the electorate, although there is still of course plenty of time for them to do so between now and 2025.

As Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael have settled in around the early 20's in terms of percentage party support, Sinn Féin has consistently registered c.30% support – rising to 33% this month. These levels of support position Sinn Féin as the single most popular party in the country, currently leading its main competitor Fine Gael by a full 10 percentage points.

There is no doubt that the strength of Sinn Féin's performance in last year's General Election took everyone by surprise, including we pollsters! As a party which had traditionally under-performed at elections compared to its opinion poll ratings, it ended up running too few candidates, leaving behind at last half a dozen seats as a result.

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

Since then, Sinn Féin has quickly adapted to its position as main opposition party, and it has been interesting to note how well its shadow cabinet has grown into its role. For example, apart from Mary Lou McDonald as party leader, Pearse Doherty consistently impresses as Sinn Féin Finance spokesperson. Eoin Ó'Broin is the media's undisputed 'go to' expert on all things to do with Housing. Meanwhile, David Cullinane has been performing creditably in Health, with the likes of Donnchadh Ó Laoghaire also making his mark in the area of Education.

It has become a cliché to note that an opinion poll is merely a snapshot in time, and this is particularly relevant in analysing and interpreting the results of polls three or four years away from the next election.

The political landscape will take many twists and turns between now and then, and it will be fascinating to see what happens over the next couple of years in relation to the leadership of the various parties, the success or failure of key Government initiatives such as Housing For All and SláinteCare, and indeed the progress of smaller parties such as the Labour Party, Social Democrats and the Green Party in their attempts to grow their support base.

Key Issues of Concern

As we begin to emerge from the Pandemic and face into the realities of a post-Covid world, we asked respondents to identify what they feel the three most important issues facing Ireland today are.

Some of the issues presented to respondents on the list were also researched in our 2020 February Post-Election poll, where the question at that time related to the key issues that people had taken into account when casting their vote at that election.

The findings are crystal clear. Specifically, two-thirds of all Irish voters identify the areas of Health (including the Health Service, Hospitals, and Mental health) and Housing (including house prices, cost of rent, homelessness, etc.) as critical issues facing Ireland today.

It is especially noteworthy that significantly more people identify Health and Housing as key issues than mention the economy and jobs.

This is not to say of course that these are the only issues of importance to Irish people today. For example, four in ten of all Irish voters aged 18-34 years identify dealing with the effects of Covid as a key priority. A quarter of those aged 55 years+ identify Crime/Law & Order as an area of critical importance, with one in ten ABC1 white collar and professional workers specifically identifying the environment and climate change as a key consideration.

There are also some interesting differences between supporters of the various parties in key perceived issues of importance for Ireland. For example, Fine Gael supporters are twice as likely as the average voter to identify Brexit as an important issue. Green Party supporters, unsurprisingly, are almost six times more likely than the average individual to single out the environment and climate change in this regard, while over four in ten of all Sinn Féin supporters are particularly concerned with issues around mental health.
