Technical Appendix

Sample Size

The results of this opinion poll are based upon a representative sample of 923 eligible Irish voters aged 18 years+.

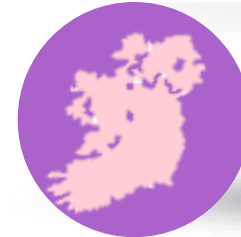

Fieldwork

As such, the results can be deemed to be accurate to within plus or minus 3.3 percentage points at the 95% confidence level. Fieldwork was conducted on an in-home, face-to-face basis over the period Friday, 1st – Tuesday, 12th November, 2019.

Location

The sample was stratified across all constituencies at 125 locations in the country with individuals selected for interview by way of Demographic Quotas (age, gender, socio-economic status) in line with Central Statistics Office (CSO) and market research industry population estimates.

Weighting

The subsequent survey results are weighted to reflect the known demographic profile of Irish adults, utilising the most recently published census population estimates from the Central Statistics Office (CSO).

Party Support

Party support levels are subsequently realigned in accordance with a technical adjustment factor, designed to smooth the effects of extreme highs and lows in support levels for individual parties as measured at a single point in time, and taking variable election day turnout levels into account.

Guidelines

All aspects of the survey, including the Party Support adjustment factor, are implemented in accordance with the technical and ethical guidelines set down by the Association of Irish Market Research Organisations (AIMRO) and the European Society of Opinion & Market Research (ESOMAR).

Party Support Adjustment Factor: Technical Note

- Predicting election results on the basis of poll data is not an exact science. All the evidence shows that support for individual parties can swing dramatically in the period between elections- very often outside the bounds of historic election results.
- What to do in these circumstances? Most polling companies in Britain and Ireland publish their raw survey results as an index of fluctuations in the emotional mood of voters. They also build in an adjustment based on a number of factors. Where we have reports of how people voted in the last general election as well as how they intend to vote in the next one we can use these data to model the likely level of swing from the last election results.
- We then add back in the forecasts of voters who have not voted last time or do not answer that particular question.
- Finally we take into account each individuals stated likelihood of voting in a forthcoming General Election.
- This is the basis of the adjusted voting forecast in Behaviour & Attitudes polls.

Adjusted figures based on:

- All who state they would definitely vote
- Weighting of those respondents who give a definite answer as to who they would vote for in a general election and who they voted for in the last election, a quarter of the way between stated voting intention and the result of the last election.
- Making no adjustment to stated voting intention of those who do not indicate how they voted in last election.

Commentary

Background

Fieldwork for today's poll was conducted over the period Friday, 1st November to Tuesday, 12th November 2019.

The survey was therefore conducted when the afterglow of Leo Varadkar's successful Brexit negotiations was beginning to dim, with the focus very much switching back to domestic politics. Levels of party support registered in this month's survey will undoubtedly have been influenced to some extent by the ongoing fall-out of "Button-Gate", whereby Fianna Fáil TD Niall Collins voted six times for his party colleague Timmy Dooley, while Dooley was not even in the Dáil chamber.

The tail-end of survey fieldwork will also have coincided with media coverage of Lorraine Clifford-Lee's tweets about travellers and non-nationals. The fact that the Fianna Fáil senator and by-election candidate for Dublin Fingal is also Fianna Fáil's spokesperson on Justice and Equality only compounded the negative impact of the scandal.

This is not to say that the political environment has necessarily been a positive one from Fine Gael's perspective. Factors such as the still-spiralling cost of the National Children's Hospital, record-breaking rental prices, and the images of a five year old homeless boy eating his dinner from the street are unlikely to have attracted many new voters to Fine Gael.

Meanwhile, ongoing events such as the Californian and Australian bush/forest fires ensure that the climate change agenda remains very firmly on the radar, strengthening the Green Party's positioning as the 2020 General Election looms ever closer.

Background

Finally, November's poll was conducted in the aftermath of the 2019 Labour Party Conference, which should have had a positive impact on its poll ratings. It will be interesting to see if the electorate heeds Brendan Howlin's call for Labour Party voters to transfer their second preferences to the Green Party, Independents and Social Democrats in the forthcoming by-elections, and indeed whether such an arrangement might possibly be formalised next April/May.

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

In last month's poll, satisfaction with Leo Varadkar's performance as Taoiseach was up five percentage points on our previous survey, with support for Fine Gael up three points. This boost for both Varadkar and Fine Gael was undoubtedly linked to the successful Brexit negotiations, the afterglow from which has already begun to dim.

Thus, satisfaction with Varadkar as Taoiseach has dropped a statistically insignificant two points to 43% this month, although this still positions the Fine Gael leader on a par with Micheál Martin as the two most (relatively) popular party leaders in the country.

Levels of satisfaction with the Government, Brendan Howlin and Mary Lou McDonald are practically identical to those measured four weeks ago. With no party leader even approaching a 50% personal satisfaction level, it is fair to say that the electorate is generally nonplussed with the calibre of political leadership currently on offer from the main parties.

As mentioned in the introduction to this report, Fianna Fáil has had a difficult time over the last couple of weeks between Button-Gate in the Dáil and 'Tweet-Gate' courtesy of Fianna Fáil senator Lorraine Clifford-Lee.

All of this adverse publicity seems to have had a negative impact on the party's standing with the public, and its support has declined by three percentage points to 25% in today's poll. This figure brings the party back to the same support levels as January to March of this year, and reverses (at least temporarily) the lead it enjoyed over Fine Gael throughout the summer months.

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

Support for the main opposition party peaks at 34% amongst those aged 55 years+ (where it is two percentage points ahead of Fine Gael), and at 30% across rural Ireland (equal to Fine Gael, with the two main parties attracting 60% of the combined rural vote).

With voters' attention switching away from recent Brexit-related Irish Government victories towards the more grim reality of domestic politics, support for Fine Gael has also dipped, albeit insignificantly, from 29% in October to 27% today. The party is, to varying degrees, the most popular in the country amongst females (28%), 18 to 54 year olds (24%), those from the ABC1 (31%) and Farming (49%) socio economic groupings, and those living in Dublin (29%).

Support for the Labour Party has increased one percentage point over the last four weeks to 6% today. While in and of itself, this increase is not significant, it is of note that the party has steadily increased in popularity from 3% in September to 5% in October, and 6% today.

Remarkably, Labour Party support is derived almost exclusively from urban areas across the country, which at least provides it with strategic direction as to the constituencies it is best advised to focus its efforts on in the run-up to the election.

Six months on from its 'breakthrough' at the Local and European Elections last May, support for the Green Party appears to have consolidated around the 6% mark – a figure which peaks amongst females (7%), 18-54 year olds (7%), and the broad Dublin and Leinster region (8%).

Party Support and Leader Satisfaction Levels

Based on these figures, the party can expect to pick up between 7 to 10 seats in the next Dáil, ensuring it is well positioned to participate in the subsequent coalition administration.

Finally, support for Sinn Féin has slowly crept back up from its low of 12% in the June Behaviour & Attitudes/Sunday Times Poll, standing at 17% this month. Support for the party is particularly strong amongst 18-34 year olds (23%), C2DE working individuals (21%) and residents of the broad Dublin and Leinster region (20%). As always, Sinn Féin's challenge will be to convert its high levels of support amongst those cohorts which have historically been less inclined to actually turn out and vote on election day.

In summary, our polling series provides evidence of a slowly growing yet consolidating support base for the combined Independents/Smaller Parties/Sinn Féin/Labour Party/Green Party bloc, with Fine Gael and Fianna Fáil in a statistical tie with each other as potential kingmakers.

As it stands, if this dynamic was to play out at the next General Election, the most likely outcome would be a Fine Gael-led rainbow coalition, with Fianna Fáil consigned to another four or five years as main opposition party.

Voter Concerns

Since January of last year, we have been tracking the key issues or concerns that are most likely to influence voters' decisions as to how to vote at the next General Election.

Survey respondents are not prompted with a list of issues at this question, but rather volunteer to the surveyor what their key preoccupations are at this point in time, with the topics volunteered then allocated to a list of pre-identified options by the surveyor.

For the third such poll in a row, the public has identified health services/hospitals, the homeless situation/lack of local authority housing, and the price of houses/rent as the top three concerns.

Indeed, when any housing-related responses are combined, we can see that two-thirds of all Irish voters now identify housing in general as a main issue for them, a figure which has increased nine percentage points since June 2018.

A number of concerns around the economy are also evident, including unemployment levels (22% this November, down 10% since January 2018), taxation (12% this month, down eight percentage points since January 2018), and the Government's general management of the economy (23% today – up eight percentage points from June 2018).

While Brexit tends not to be specifically singled out by respondents at this question, there is no doubt that the significant increase in concern over the management of the economy is related to fears over Brexit for many individuals.

Voter Concerns

With a view to exploring people's specific views of Brexit, a second set of questions was therefore administered. This section of the poll reveals that seven in ten of all Irish voters are worried about the impact of Brexit on the Irish economy – rising to three-quarters of all males, those aged 35 years plus, ABC1 white collar and professional workers, and urban dwellers. An even higher 85% of Irish farmers are worried about the impact of Brexit on the economy.

Furthermore, our poll reveals that a small majority (52%) of the electorate are worried about the impact of Brexit on their personal finances, a level of concern which peaks at 75% amongst the farming community.
